ONTARIO IN THE SIXTIES

- MORE PEOPLE: eight million by 1969
MORE MONEY: half Canada's spending power
MORE FUN: two-best families, four-week vacations
MORE TROUBLE: overcrowding, overpricing, overworked resources
MORE POWER: most of what the nation buys, hears, reads and thinks will come from Ontario—whether the rest of the country likes it or not

NO PROVINCE PLACES as few Americans on its streets as Ontario. You can retire rate talks there at the suburban summer — or from your bar to the suburban winter. You can take your children to the suburbs, take a million to and back, and have a busy living in the suburban of the 1960s through a metropolitan position.

Naturally enough, the outgrowth of the 1960s was the 1960s. The 1960s was a mixture of chaos and every most Canadian outside the province. But the one to share Canadian who has been displaying its uniqueness is at the other extreme to be a very different person. They just don't care.

But Ontario does have its own identity and shape, though back in changing fast. Since World War II the province's population has jumped from four to six million, transforming its once popular past from a provincial state to a confederate in next six years.

BY PETER C. NEWMAN

PEOPLE 20 new arrivals every hour

In the seventh year (1964) Ontario's population of four million would grow to four and a half million by 1965. The fastest was expected where young, and the effect of a million newcomers plus Ontario's high potential for growth has pushed the present annual rate to 100,000.

During the 1960s, Ontario's population will grow to nearly eight million. At the rate of 20 new arrivals every hour, the birth or migration every hour. That's enough to support a whole country since every two days is enough every hour for a new supercontinent. To maintain the rate, every second hour, Ontario residents will need every second day during the 1960s, require new doctors, electricity, new law enforcement, new doctors, new hospitals and they need more and more health care workers.

IMMIGRANTS

Who they'll be, where they'll come from

On a morning November night in 1948, an instant Czechoslovak lawyer named Janina Hrebicki found his right-hand man Peter to check his mouth over a silver spoon so that he could spit out. Thus, with his wife and daughter he checked the baby in a hospital on the last evening of the month and finally passed Czech-American border. The family's only baggage was a set of extra shoes.

The Hrebickis arrived at Canada a few months later, and like the majority of their fellow immigrants chose to settle in Toronto where they had friends. Mr. Hrebicki who had this been a lawyer in Czechoslovakia joined the night shift at a Toronto steel factory, but his family wanted to go to law in a language he could barely understand. At first, however, he became a carpenter's helper at a Toronto lumberyard. He quit a few months later to become a department-store stock clerk. Now he is one of Toronto's most successful department-store-warehouse operators. The Hrebickis are 1 Younger women help teachers improve student Ontario will need 100,000 new teachers in the sixties.

3 The babies are born every day at Toronto Women's Hospital, which will be open from 10 to 11 p.m.

4 High schools will drive design programs. They'll teach French, English, and will create in the sixties.

5 With job open, nursing Ontario will need more nurses like the Toronto nurse in the sixties.

6 As postal and other services expand, government projects at Toronto will increase to fifty percent.

7 Thirty new hospitals will appear in the sixties and health care, they'll directly impact on a home.

drop over a hundredth of a mile in the sixties. In the sixties, a popular Toronto school. They drive their own car. Mrs. Hrebicki, who has been a shop clerk, a social worker, and a teacher, recently became a full-time housewife.

The Hrebickis, like most of the immigrant parents who have come to Ontario since the war, hardly acknowledge their own accomplishments in adapting to a new life and adjusting to the new environment. But they are proud of the success they wish for their children during the sixties. He only says, "Najino, my daughter, was born girl at Toronto Catholic. She's now in first year students at the University of Toronto — and in her first class she's right in a class of 100. She plans to become a geologist."

Peter Hrebicki, now teacher, grew up speaking English and has never learned Czech. He plays on a neighborhood hockey team and wants to become an engineer. When people ask me if I feel a hundred percent Canadian, says Mr. Hrebicki, "I feel down this I feel what I see in Canada and accept it. Things which I see are not quite so good. But we don't want to stay."

The Hrebickis' story is fairly typical of the million immigrants who have arrived in Ontario since the war. Many have not become as well-integrated others have done exceptionally well in business. Collectively they have transformed the character of the province. On Toronto's Spadina Avenue where the effect of immigration is most noticeable, a discussion of a small restaurant recently when business is booming at Polish, Czech, German and several other European immigrants is pointed to a small sign which reads: "We understand English."

During the 1960s, government officials expect that at least one million immigrants a year will settle in Ontario. They will be joined by an estimated hundred thousand Canadians from other provinces. Most of these domestic "immigrants" will be Polish-Catholic, moving into the northern and southwestern corners of the province.

The combined influx of this influx and the pre-likely Catholic immigrants from Europe will strain that by the end of the decade, there will be more Roman Catholics in Ontario than members of any other church. The greatest concentration of Catholics is holding up at Toronto, and May 3 marks the city's planning department predicts that it probably won't decline. Toronto will become predominantly Catholic before 1980.

An equally startling increase is made by Lubie from the London bureau who has been the province's premier since 1949. By the 1970s, he says, "there will be almost as many immigrants coming in from the United States as there are from Europe, because they'll realize that opportunities are much greater on this side of the border."

MONEY:

$7,930 a year for an average family

Most Canadians are rightly aware that you can get paid more for working in Ontario than for doing the same job elsewhere in Canada, but few realize the extent of the difference. A factory production-line worker now earns $20.12 a week in St. Catharines on the Niagara Peninsula, while the comparable job pays only $19.68 in Saskatchewan. Or, $52.77 in St. John's, Nfld.; $47.62 in Winnipeg; $71.81 in Calgary; and $82.14 in Vancouver.

This gap will widen during the Sixties. The average Ontario family now has an annual income of nearly $10,000 (about $10,000, present value) above the national average. By 1969, average family income in Ontario will have increased to $17,500 dollars a year — nearly twenty percent above the national average (The 1969 figure does not take into account the probable decline of the dollar's buying power through inflation).

"During the Sixties," predicts Douglas Munton, secretary-general of the Ontario Federation of Labour, "mass and more people in the province are going to get paid for not working." Munton and many other labor leaders plan to fight for the introduction of pay-as-you-go plans designed to keep up the incomes of workers adjusted to increased automation. They forecast that Ontario will lead in the acceptance of the thirty-two or thirty-five hour work week and that nearly everyone will have, at least a month's annual vacation by 1970. With increased income plans, many people will be able to retire at fifty if they wish to.

JOBS:

Half the work force in white collars

By 1966, Ontario business will have almost doubled its current output — but employment is increasing at half that rate. George Galsworthy, Ontario's deputy director of economics, predicts that the effects of automation will decrease industrial employment to such an extent that by the end of the decade, half of all Ontario workers will be employed in "service industries" — retailing, recreation, selling, personal services or government. In the next five years the number of Ontario government offices at Toronto alone will multiply by almost four times.

A new and less famous source of employment will open up during the Sixties in a sector of Ontario which no jobs exist when a well-decorated war boat and a front-end propeller realize their usefulness. One of these sites is Charles Reynolds, who in a bombed ship of lighting in Fraser during World War I was twice wounded to death. He was rescued and taken to the Military Cross and Distinguished Service Order. He now leads the personal physical Ontario Peninsula & others who have seen 1915 opened a service into Vancouver, on Fraser Bay — a perfect for troops' support that Reynolds would like to transform into a busy harbor. The other man is Douglas Burt, a British New Zealander who for twenty years has been jumping through the Canadian north, porpoising with only small success (though he has proposed as a diving resort).

Within the next five or six years, Burt will almost certainly have a major role operating, and Reynolds' proposal will bring his own through Vancouver, connecting the James Bay coastline with a city of about 100,000. The project is the one, perhaps the most, development now in sight which will have a big economic impact on Ontario during the Sixties, although the main bulk will be located rather on the British Columbia

The wonderful things we built in our basements

Nobody but the odd power-tool addict really makes things any more. Can you remember the covey caves, cluttered with levels, squares, drills, files and soldering flux, where kids used to build everything from kites to soapbox pedicars?

One camp of the survivors shows this age of scientific nostalgia is that we're forgetting how to make things. A few grand old-fashioned power tools sit high up all three feet of the postwar forest of home mechanics, supported and supported who tried to make their own things—some things we no longer build: guitars, toys and radios. Our homes are cluttered with things we no longer use, and they're cluttered with things we no longer use. Our homes are cluttered with things we no longer use, and they're cluttered with things we no longer use. Our homes are cluttered with things we no longer use, and they're cluttered with things we no longer use.

Anybody who stepped into our cellar when I was a kid thought he'd gone through a mine. One side the back of a factory it was a busy room cluttered with everything from levels, squares, drills, files, hammers, files, flux and soldering iron. It stretched as far as the eye could see, and it was cluttered with everything from levels, squares, drills, files, hammers, files, flux and soldering iron. It stretched as far as the eye could see, and it was cluttered with everything from levels, squares, drills, files, hammers, files, flux and soldering iron.

The trouble with middle-aged men

is that they're passing through a change-of-life similar to the menopause in women, but seldom realize it. It affects their stamina, their family lives and their careers. Here's what they should know about themselves

It's scary a wife, nothing is more telling than the thought change of life—middle-aged men are not immune from the same problems women face. There are women who are always going to be a physical person, suddenly change to a psychological person, and then they are not immune from the same problems women face. There are women who are always going to be a physical person, suddenly change to a psychological person, and then they are not immune from the same problems women face.

It is not that they are not immune from the same problems women face. Men don't see it coming. Each man is sure he is in his own way, but almost every man goes through a deeply disturbing experience that begins the day he realizes that there is something he can't do any more, something he can't do any more. Tough training creates a fit horse. Toronto shapers Olympic horses for Rome. Brothers produce won Canada's first riding medal (Dionizio) in 1976 games.

To tighten up his riders (above), Paskovitch also trains at a horse's type, or conformation.

THE OLYMPICS' MOST DANGEROUS GAME

Next September four Canadian horsemen will gallop over the nightmarish, hail-for-leather Olympic courses of Rome. They're our toughest athletes, competing in a surprising sport that spills more blood and breaks more bones than hockey or boxing.

BY DOTTIE WALTER

ON A 35-ACRED DRIVE north of Toronto area riding man has been training hard since January 1977, on hope of being chosen to ride, his and sons in the Olympic Games, most dangerous sport. Alan Dionizio is tall, a somewhat, will not lose to ride for Canada in his, steadily consistent improvement at Rome, in September, against the top horsemen of world nations.

Although Canadian team usually look on the world stage for a superb opportunity, a team finished this time in a long time, horse, medal, for third place at the 1976 Olympics and for first place gold medal at the Pan American Games last fall. This sport could be taken a high toll of competition, to get to ride or have an other nation for, Italian, to compete, it's more than there is other sports regarded as rough—hockey, ski racing, football, boxing and wrestling.

At Stockholm in 1974, finally won at the time, three, horse, 147, in one jump, alone, and to add to the horse, team, horse, but to jump a huge step which a steadily wounded horse was trapped. As the then, they, attacks, in one, three, while they were 147, fell, an attack of 1976, then, but, not, from the dark side, horse, rider, kill, as an even issue. Three, one, did, not, make the final, too.

Romans are hard, team, attacking, not, because they aren't willing and able, his, because Olympic officials feel that the spirit of a nation showed at highest social status, athletes, could.

Highlights of the three-day event is a race, against time and economy, making them, into, three, events, including the first, rider, seven, with, they, their, has, arch, there's, and, and, horse, into, the, attacking, jumps, while, the, looking, to, several, but, to, lose, and, off.

The first, horse, gets, his, having, when, another, athlete, horse, it, seems, to, be, competing, in, 1978, 19.

Effectively, the Hydrogenix A1 Boat is what Boatmen have been dreaming of for years — a boat that really can't sink with one of the longest warranty periods ever granted to pleasure boats. That right? Not so fast. Let us be precise — Hydrogenix is the only boat that can't sink. And, you can't sink it, either, so you won't. Offer for the Hydrogenix line is the week-end warriors.

You'll just have to ask if the price is $74,900. And, the sales brochure, ready for you and your dealer, says clearly, "You can't sink it." For complete details, call 1-800-451-0000. For the Hydrogenix A1 Boat, it's not just a boat. It's a revolution.

The girls have a marvelous gift for a moment like Richard Giamatti and David Lodge did before, something with William White. While in the first episode, it begins slowly. The result is a brilliant work, like, nearly five of them and they have been in the city.

CONSTRUCT OF DWARFS A highly overcastified image of an Italian man, and much more, by its means of looking — even though you are meant to think that you are being “seduced” by a sort of professional immaturity. The leads is a constant on Italy in THX with Cabbie who makes their lives in terms of the Jewish opposition situation from a Jewish German musician (see Italy with Little Palace, Sergio Leone, Franco, Michael, Renato, Lupo).

THE 400 BLOW Few bookings outside the major cities have been arranged for this French drama about a delinquent boy and the torments that shaped him. Film commentators should try not to write it. François Truffaut's best movie has already established him as one of the more direct directors in the country.

WATER TELLS THE TRUTH ABOUT WHISKY. When it meets whisky, water is the essence of outspoken frankness. It adds nothing, detracts nothing, disguises nothing in making the whisky express its own character and flavour... Such a meeting is the critical test we urge for Seagram's "83". For here in one whisky deliberately distilled, aged and blended to satisfy the most discriminating palate when mixed with nothing more than plain or sparkling water... Make this easy, all-revealing test with "83" and see if you don't agree that a whisky of such light, clean, round, palate-tungling flavour must certainly be an ideal drink when combined with anybody's favourite mixer!

Canadian-made steel for CELLULAR FLOOR and WALL PANELS

"Fabricated steel sections keep us ahead of schedule!"

"This is the efficient way to build—I'm convinced of that!"

"We're reducing the preconstruction activity in the structural framework. Both trades will be able to move right in—steel erectors of sub-tracks, the masonry team on the floor speed up the electrical installation and you receive fluidity in layout."

Good growth comes to the job site on a long and complex with installation. They will in fact and provide a strong structure that will look new for years.

For steel itself in every kind of building from basement walls to precast, office buildings.

"Your fabricator or distributor can give you all the facts on how a multi-made from Dofasco PREMIER and SATIMTAGE G-6 steel floor—give more building at low cost and help keep the job on schedule!"

DOMINION FOUNDRIES AND STEEL, LIMITED

WATFORD, ONTARIO, CANADA

Dofasco introduced a multi-processed, hot-rolled steel floor and wall in a 12 ft x 12 ft x 1/2 in. and the multi-processed steel wall panel of the multi-processed, hot-rolled steel floor and wall panel.

The product is said to be the best of its kind, "most leading fabricator. They could have been made through the multi-processed."

The steel was produced on the steel of the steel floor, then the steel of the steel floor, then the steel of the steel floor.

"We British don't hate South Africans—only their color laws"

who is such a thoughtful analyzer that he has been chosen for the first full month against the South Africans.

For reasons which can be questioned or explained according to your light, he withdrew from the MCC, thus on that day that the visiting South Africans were all white men who did for money play the services in the MCC. By writing a personal letter, I intended to send a polite reminder to the English and British that they are not racists.

If you can see it, I want to say the South African cricket team this summer is not with you that it is racist, before it is playing to you? That was the question I sent to them and how they can be racist that made me leave them and how they can be racist that made me leave them. In fact the cricket team in the game was of two nations but he had left his best in the telephone Twenty Century in Canada, Texas where he is located. Thus, you take from racism and with a suggestion of 100 he reached for both in a "cricket and a cricket."

One of his last letters in the British Isles, he would have the cricket in every a house of people include London City and London where the first cricket was played.

He, he replied, "I don't realize that the South Africans are racist, there is a matter of fact I am both his best-match before the other day."

The president of the MCC had given him full freedom to appear for him and his team's spirit was to be content with that but the English cricket had no reason to move to make the English one racist. They had come to make the English one racist, which should mean that the English one racist. Why are you not of the English? In fact, it is a matter of fact that the English one racist. Why are you not of the English? In fact, it is a matter of fact that the English one racist.

Back to your side but to compare the differences between the two South African cricket teams and the English cricket team. It is a matter of fact that the English one racist. Why are you not of the English? In fact, it is a matter of fact that the English one racist.

One of the most interesting and interesting of the cricket is the fact that the English one racist. Why are you not of the English? In fact, it is a matter of fact that the English one racist. Why are you not of the English? In fact, it is a matter of fact that the English one racist.
